Description: The David Levine Album of Drawings from The New York Review of Books
Copyright 1965, The New York Review

Portfolio of ink drawings of literary personages.

David Levine has been called "the wittiest caricaturist since Max Beerbohm". His caricatures and drawings have been a feature of The New York Review of Books since it began regular publication in September 1963. In 1964 the Review published a portfolio of drawings of Levine's caricatures of literary personages, a few of the many he contributed during its first year of publication.
